I saw many bright tily sympathize with the farmer as he looks over his fields and sees his corn twisted and bleached, the garden vegetables stunted and hardly able to stand up under the load of dust which encumber their puny leaves, and the grass nearly burnt up between the fierce rays of the sun and the oven-like temperature of the earth. We know now that our rural friends are not "croaking." Streets dusty and dirty as they were never before; the dead leaves lying on the Capitol Square, where green grass ought to be; sickly-looking plants in front yards; markets poorly supplied with vegetables, when there should be plenty, and warnings to be careful with city water, all confirm us in the conclusion that this is really "a very dry spell."

OUR LAST. It was weeks and weeks back when we

DROUGHTS AND FLOODS. We have still eight days of this month to our credit, and we may have copious show-ers in that time; but, as it stands, this year is the dryest of all since the commencement of the record.

The fall of 1870 was a time of drought and also of great floods. The James rose from what was then regarded as its least to its greatest depth. In July, 1872, there was another great drought. On many of the railroads the tank-wells gave out, and supplies of water were with difficulty obtained. And less marked degree than at first. About hell-only life, more perfect and beautiful again, in the fall of 1877, the drought was very severe, and the James repeated its exploit of 1870-swelling from a small, clear stream into a great yellow flood.

The leaks in the dam have been stopped, and very little water now escapes. SCARCITY OF WATER.

The Superintendent of the City Water-Works has already called attention to the low condition of the water in the reservoirs and river, and urges all citizens to be very economical in the use of the city water. This is a timely suggestion of his. There is a vast quantity of water wasted in Richmond. The authorities hardly know the extent of the waste, but an investigation will show it. Hundreds of water-closets are allowed to run without stoppage, and the use of hose on streets, though a great luxury and one for which citizens are required to pay, dispose of much water likely gold even in countries where gold alone is to be needed for better purposes. Our people will have to be economical in the barely able to meet the public demand.

Therefore it is left to the good people of the city to take detected except at intervals of six or rency was the best substitute for metallic care of themselves in the matter, and to stop waste whether it be from hose, fountains, or closets. Many mill-streams have dwindled down to such a size that the wheels cannot be worked a day in a week. The Chickabominy in the neighborhood of Richmond is now a very insignificant stream. It can now be called running water only by courtesy.

BUFFALO LITHIA SPRINGS, July 17, 1879.

On July 17, 1878. Miss —, aged about fourteen yeters, consulted me as to the use of the Lithia writers. She was pale and greatly emachated, weighing only sixty-seven pounds, and suffering from revere dyspepsis of some two years' duration. The usual symptoms of long-continued dyspepsia, in an aggravated degree, were present—want of appetite, acid eructations, gastric pain after ingestion of almost any article of diet, nauser, constipation, extreme langour and muscular feebleness, hypochondriasis, frequent headache, &c. In addition to the dyspepsia, there had existed also total suppression of the menstrual flow for twelve months. She was put upon the use of waters of Spring No. 2 and directions given her as 10 her diet. Her improvement, though slow at first, was decided and continuous, and she left the Springs, after a sojourn of two months, weighing one hundred and eight pounds, and fully restored to health, both as regards dyspepsia and the menstrual trouble.

NOTICE.—The condition of the river at this time is such, from the excessive dry spell, as to call upon the cilizens to exercise the greatest possible economy in the use of water. The numbs, when the river is full, are barry able to keep up the supply, and now that their power is desented quite a third, the city must to a greater or less extent suffer on the higher points. Every effort is now being made to keep up the supply. The dry season having commenced so early this year, we may reasonably commenced to early thin year, we may reasonable anticipate, without rain, the river will be lower than anticipate, without rank, he was the that he been for years perhaps than it ever was before. It is urgently requested that every precaution will be used to avoid a calamity that seems professible.
